Description:
At the annual SNMA Regional Conference, over 180 students from 13 medical schools and undergraduate institutions across DC, Maryland, and Virginia will gather to equip themselves with skills, insights, and connections to become the health professionals of tomorrow.

This year’s theme, “A Seat at the Table: Maximizing Your Potential as a Student, Advocate, and Healer,” stems from SNMA’s core mission and commitment to support current and future underrepresented minority students, to address the needs of underserved communities and to increase the number of clinically excellent, culturally competent, and socially conscious physicians. Dr. Chavon Onumah, Assistant Professor at the The George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences, will deliver the keynote address. Scheduled sessions are listed above.

The SNMA is the nation’s oldest student-run organization that addresses the needs and concerns of medical and premedical minority students and the health of underserved communities. Membership in the SNMA includes over 5,000 medical students, premedical students and physicians dedicated to eliminating disparities in health and medicine. Sessions for the 2016 Region VI regional conference center on the ability of the health professional to intervene at critical time points in patients’ lives, and our speakers grapple with the question of what happens to patients when we send them home or before they enter a healthcare setting. We hope that students leave contemplating what ills they tire of seeing, what problems they will identify at the bedside, and what role they will play in solving them. Other features of the conference include interactive clinical workshops and dynamic discussions about issues relevant to students of underrepresented backgrounds with an interest in the field of medicine.
