The GWell Center for Healthcare Professionals strives to create and promote an environment that supports comprehensive health and wellness for all members of the One GW community in the GW School of Medicine & Health Sciences (SMHS), the Medical Faculty Associates (MFA), and the George Washington University Hospital (GWUH), through initiatives that inspire and educate members to take responsibility for their health, create a workplace climate that promotes preventive wellness, and support members with mental and physical health-related needs.

In support of this mission, the GWell Center for Healthcare Professionals is requesting proposals for pilot programs that describe an evidence-based approach to fostering wellness among the members of our community—to benefit the students, residents, graduate students, post-doctoral fellows, faculty, staff, and alumni of the One GW system, or a specific subset of this population.

All members of the GW healthcare and health sciences community are invited to apply, including: Students, residents, graduate students, post-doctoral fellows, faculty, staff, and alumni. Please note that applications from MFA staff will require written approval from the supervisor.

Proposals may focus on the whole One GW community or a sub-population, educational or experiential programs, development of institutional wellness resources, or research into wellness questions specific to our community. You may apply individually or in teams. Interdisciplinary teams are welcome.

Your written 3-5 page proposal should include:

1. Problem Statement: A clear definition of the specific problem related to healthcare provider wellness you seek you address, including the targeted population within the One GW community and reason this population as chosen.
2. Background: The history and present state of this problem, including existing stakeholders within the One GW community.
3. Proposed Solution: With supporting evidence for its likely success.
4. Methods: Means of implementation, including stakeholder engagement and management of anticipated challenges.
6. Budget: Anticipated itemized expenses, as well as total. Awards will be made up to $750 per proposal. Awarded funds must be used in total no later than June 30, 2020. Depending on funding requests of accepted proposals, we anticipate funding up to four pilot projects.
7. Next Steps: Discussion of what you would expect to see grow from such an intervention, and whether you foresee this program becoming self-sustaining.
